Engineers have the chance to solve problems that mean life or death to millions if not billions of people.

7. Ensure environmental sustainability.
8. Develop a global partnership for development.

View these goals through an engineering lens and you see that achieving Nos. 1, 4, 5, 6, and 7 could certainly include a technological intervention. Most of the other goals could benefit from engineering as well. For example, Khan Academy (www.khanacademy.org) offers free, high-quality primary educational material via the web, and the Global Alliance for Clean Cookstoves (www.cleancookstoves.org) promotes clean and efficient cooking solutions to improve the respiratory health of women and children. Although significant progress has been made towards achieving the goals, many will not be met by the Summit’s 2015 deadline. The Millennium Development Goals, as well as the myriad other goals, many will not be met by 2015.
